A Tick At A Time.

Somebody has told a fanciful story of a salesman who was engaged in an attempt to sell a grandfather clock, telling the prospective purchaser that it would run for one hundred years and be just as good at the end of the period as at the beginning. The clock overhauling this remark began figuring out how many times it would have to tick in that 100 years, and emitted a deep groan, and began to complain "I can stand it; I can stand it," whereupon a little cheap alarm clock on an adjoining shelf spoke up: "Cheer up, you don't have to do it all at once. Remember it is just a 'tick' at a time, a tick at a time."

In these present days as many of us look ahead and see and contemplate the many difficulties to be overcome and the great problems to be solved we are apt to emulate the grandfather clock in its despair and exclaim: "We can't stand it; we can't do it." Looking at the sum total of the things to be faced and to be done, we become discouraged, forgetting that, after all, we are called upon to do only one thing at a time, and that that one thing is not beyond our ability or strength.

Furthermore, in the doing of that one thing immediately confronting us, we develop the ability and build up the strength which enables us to successfully tackle the next thing that comes from strength to strength, achievement following achievement, whereas nothing but weakness and failure would result from idle contemplation of the many tasks ahead, leading to discouragement which prevents action.

If at the inception of the project to build the Canadian Pacific Railway, financiers and contractors looked from Montreal towards the Pacific Ocean began to count the number of miles of track that were necessary and the millions of ties to be laid, the project would have been bridged, the tunnels to be bored, and the mountains to be climbed, they, too, might well have exclaimed: "We can't do it; it is too much." But they had the sense to realize that it was not a matter of "it" at a time, but a "tick at a time," and so it was that every day and every rail spike helped to lay the next tie and spike the next rail. And so the job was done in record time, and the whole history of Canada and the Empire changed for the better.

And in the philosophy of life it is also well to remember that success and achievement is not confined solely to things material. Too often we regard material reverses and material losses as the "fatal" things of life, forgetting that health, contentment and happiness are the really vital things that matter. And these essential attributes of life are achieved just as material things are gained by, as the little clock said, "a tick at a time."

Grain Samples For Europe Sent To European Traders

Samples of this year's western Canadian grain crop, on which the prices offered by British and European traders will partly be based, have reached Montreal from Winnipeg and will be shipped immediately to the British and continental grain exchanges.

The samples were prepared at the office of the chief grain inspector in Winnipeg and are contained in strong close woven bags.

These samples were shipped by the Board Grain Commissioners and are billed to the grain exchanges and grain trade associations in Germany, Holland, Italy, Belgium, France, England, Ireland and Scotland.

The samples, which are made up annually by the western grain standards committee in Winnipeg, contain grain from practically every district in the prairie west and give a fair indication of the quality of wheat which European countries might expect in the filling of large orders. Specimens of each grade are included, and before shipment is authorized each sample is analyzed and approved by Dr. F. J. Birchard, chief chemist of the Board of Grain Commissioners' Research Laboratory.

Delayed Publication

Nellie McClung's new book, "Flowers For the Living," was delayed a little in appearance because of a typographical error, which, considering the writer's well-known total abstinence views, looked like someone's idea of a lark. "Between the tall tapers," wrote Mrs. McClung in the first paragraph of the book "Between the tall tapers," said the version that had to hastily be recalled.

Has Served Forty-Five Years

Inspector Cumming Of Royal Canadian Mounted Retires On Pension

With a record of 45 years service in the Royal Canadian Mounted Police and the R.N.W.M.P., Inspector W. A. Cumming, following a six months' leave of absence, will be retired on a pension at the end of this time. It was learned at the Regina headquarters.

Inspector Cumming tendered his resignation in October. He came from Toronto as a boy and joined the then Royal North West Mounted Police in 1888. He was promoted through the non-commissioned ranks until he has reached his present rank which he has held for a number of years. He has been district paymaster and quartermaster. He was also in charge of the weather bureau at Regina.

Inspector Cumming has the distinction of being the only man in the service for such a long period. His service as a pioneer, coming to the west from England 49 years ago. Five sons served in the world wars. Two of them were wounded and one was a prisoner of war for three years.

"THESE HARD TIMES"

"The hard times and scarcity of money makes it more important than ever to economize. One way I save on clothes is by renewing the color of my clothes. I use Diamond Dyes, stockings, and underwear. For dyeing, or tinting, I always use Diamond Dyes. They never wash out. The economical ones by far because they make you proud. Why, things look better than new when you use Diamond Dyes. They never spot, streak, or run. They are smooth and evenly, wash in the hands of even a ten year old child. Another thing, Diamond Dyes never take the life out of cloth or make it limp as the dyes do. They are called 'the world's finest dyes'."

Exports Of Canadian Salmon Have More Than Doubled

Canada is replacing the United States in the British market for canned salmon and for the first six months of the present calendar year, the Dominion more than doubled its exports over the corresponding period a year ago.

Up to the end of September, according to the current issue of the Commercial Intelligence Journal, the United Kingdom imported from Canada 102,000 cwt. of canned salmon, while imports from the United States totaled 86,000 cwt. The share was only 47,000 cwt., while that of the United States was considerably over 100,000 cwt.

Canadian exports of 262,000 cwt. of canned salmon during 1932.

Western Wheat Crop

Yield Of 249,979,800 Bushels Estimated For Season Of 1933

A yield of 249,979,800 bushels is the estimated wheat crop of the three western provinces, according to reports compiled by the Northwest Grain Dealers' Association in its annual forecast.

The acreage on which the estimate is based is that compiled by the association early in the season, taking into consideration the weather. The figures for wheat are 15,691,000 net acreage, compared with 23,878,000 acres used in the Dominion Government report, which on September 9, estimated a crop of 246,400,000 bushels.

She was a hearty to eat, and I took Kreschen for about a month, when people began telling me that I was losing it. I have lost fat that was not to me, and now, after three months of Kreschen, I only go 100 lbs. in weight. I feel like I have gained my old self back, and I am going to keep it. British Industries Fair 1932

To Be Held In London and Birmingham, England, 22nd February To 20th March

Already the largest national trade exhibition in the world, the British Industries Fair, or the "B.I.F.," as it is known, is every year becoming more and more representative of British industry as a whole.

This unique display of the manufactures of the home country and of the products of the Empire countries will open in London and Birmingham on February 22, a date which is chosen because it is convenient for the principal buyers and exhibitors of the industries represented and in order to attract the trade buyers from other continents who are in the habit of paying their annual visits to Europe at that time of year.

In London, the principal development of the new section is the new large part of the White City, Shepherds Bush, for the first combined display of the great textile industries of Great Britain and Northern Ireland.

Last February for the first time there was a new section at the White City for the products of the cotton textile industry, while the British Artificial Silk Exhibition became to all intents and purposes part of the Fair by being held during the first week of the Fair at the Royal Albert Hall in 1932.

These two exhibitions, the Cotton Textile and the Artificial Silk Show were such a success that meetings were called of representatives of these and other textile industries and it was unanimously decided to make a joint display.

The lighter industries other than textiles, will continue to be housed at the Royal Albert Hall, the Exhibition Building will have its display of the products of the British Dominions and Colonies.

The master industries, once again will have their display in the new permanent Fair Buildings at the Crystal Palace, Birmingham. There is no less than in London, important developments are promised. One of the most important, involves still further extensions of the buildings, a new section for cycles and motor cycles, their component parts, tires and other rubber equipment, and accessories of every kind. This section, which will be the first representative display in the Fair of the British cycle and motor cycle industry, is being organized by the British Cycle and Motor Cycle Manufacturers' and Traders' Union who will have an information bureau in the section.

Another new section at the Crystal Palace will be for quarrying and rockmaking plant, and in the organization of this, the Fair will have the co-operation of the Institute of Quarrying which has in recent years organized an exhibition of this kind.

In previous years the overseas buyers will find the B.I.F. of 1932 more convenient and attractive than in previous years. It is hoped for the first time to make arrangements for civic and other forms of hospitality which are likely to appeal to the business man from abroad whether from a British or a foreign country.

Admittance during business hours is by invitation only. Invitations can be obtained from The Office of H. M. Trade Commissioner, 703, Royal Bank Building, Winnipeg.

Empire Broadcasting Plan

Will Erect Station In England To Broadcast Messages To Whole Empire

Without further delay, the British Broadcasting Corporation will begin plans for the erection of a short-wave broadcasting station at Davenport, which the whole Empire will listen, it was announced recently.

Plans for the station were discussed at the last Imperial Conference, but difficulties of financing the project on a permanent basis postponed the development. Now, however, need from an imperial point of view, coupled with a strong desire expressed throughout the Empire, especially from the crown colonies, determine the corporation to proceed without further delay.

The object will be to secure as many listeners as possible throughout the Empire at a convenient time. Details of the time arrangements will depend on experiments. Several wave lengths will be used in order to provide the best reception under varying conditions.

Scheme May Work

British Have Idea To Keep Indian Tribesmen Quiet

Non-violent methods to keep the tribesmen of North-western India quiet are being used soon by the British. Instead of bombs, an aeroplane is to be fitted with a powerful loud-speaker, from which ordinary tones will emerge incessantly. Several weeks of the time arrangements will depend on experiments. Several wave lengths will be used in order to provide the best reception under varying conditions.

Expectation is that the natives will think it is the voice of their big brother, and will not fight the mighty white man, who could not help killing some of them.

Bonus For Large Families

Each of the 10 families in Italy with the largest number of children will be given a five-room bungalow by the government of Rome, beginning on Christmas, 1932, it was announced recently. Similar prizes will be given each for five years. A provision that the houses cannot be sold, leased or mortgaged within 30 years will be attached however.

Canada's Great Buffalo Herds

Department Of The Interior To Reduce Herd In Buffalo National Park

So successful has been Canada's effort in bringing back the buffalo that it has again become necessary to dispose of the animals surplus to the grazing capacity of the great fenced reserve near Victoria, British Columbia. Buffalo National Park Arrangements are being made by the Department of the Interior to reduce the herd by the slaughtering of 1,500 head this fall.

About ten years ago it was felt that the range at Buffalo National Park was not capable of sustaining the large numbers of buffalo which were grazing there. A report was made at that time by officials of the Dominion Department of Agriculture which recommended that the herd should not be permitted to exceed 5,000 head, as under normal conditions the area reserved was not capable of sustaining a greater number.

It was found necessary to slaughter almost 2,000 in the fall of 1923, and since that time nearly 4,000 more have been disposed of. Although the slaughtering of this large number was helping to keep down the size of the herd it was not sufficient to reduce it to the proper extent. It was estimated that nearly 7,000 additional head were transported north to join a herd of approximately 2,000 wood buffalo which had its habitat on the immense natural range known as Fort Smith, N.W.T.

The buffalo robes and coats of today are much superior articles to those known when the buffalo roamed the prairies in countless numbers. The buffalo robe of the old days was usually a shaggy yellow, due to the fact that the great majority of animals were shot by the Indians in the summer when the robe is at its lightest in colour and pokest in texture. The animals from the Buffalo National Park herd, however, are disposed of in the late fall when the robe has attained its winter thickness as well as the fine dark colour which distinguishes it during the cold season. Modern methods have been devised to make it possible to prepare the skin so that it is flexible and light in weight.

In addition to the fur, the slaughter of the buffalo produces a quantity of choice game meat. The flesh of a young well-matured animal is considered many times to be better flavoured than the best beef, and this has been demonstrated by the success with which the meat of the buffalo slaughtered in previous years was disposed of.

Buffalo National Park is a very interesting objective for tourists or moving about in great numbers is considered a thrilling one. The buffalo are in excellent condition as the area in which the park is situated is part of their natural habitat and it received an adequate amount of moisture during the last two years.

Signs Of Better Times

Outlook For Sale Of Canadian Wheat Is Improving

Signs of better times are apparent in Europe and the outlook for the sale of Canadian wheat is improved. In the opinion of A. L. Seale, president of the Seale Grain Company, one of the largest grain elevator concerns in western Canada.

Back from an extensive trip through Great Britain, Germany and France, Mr. Seale said, in an interview at Winnipeg, that he was convinced the new British National Government would introduce some form of tariff, though he thought any preference for Canadian wheat would be conditional on a preference for British goods coming to Canada.

France, crops depressed by unfavorable weather, will require between 40,000,000 and 60,000,000 bushels of wheat from outside the country this season, he believes.

May Revise History

Evidence Proves Why Sir Henry Clinton Failed Lord Cornwallis

A newly revealed incident of the Revolution and one that is certain to cause a revision of many histories of the period has come out of the Yorktown Sequelential celebration.

Briefly the tale is that a strange physical disability, rather than lack of military skill on the part of Sir Henry Clinton, Commander-in-Chief of the British forces in America at the time, was perhaps the deciding factor in the victory of the Continentals at Yorktown over Lord Cornwallis.

At the time Clinton was supposed to be pushing from New York to rescue the beleaguered Cornwallis, he was temporarily blind and too proud to admit it. Had it been otherwise, Cornwallis might well have saved the ignominy of surrender. Washington himself feared the arrival of Clinton. That is why he refused to prolong the surveillance of the retreating British.

The story of Clinton's affliction was brought to Richmond, Virginia, by Dr. Randolph G. Adams, head of the famous Clement's Library at the University of Michigan.

According to Dr. Adams, who has access to Revolutionary papers never before examined by historians, Clinton, a morbid and extremely introverted man, was subject to temporary blind spells in periods of great stress when he was called to make vital decisions. Evidence of this is in the documents which have been acquired by the Clement's Library since 1926.

An episode dealing with Clinton's affliction written by Dr. Adams was included in the pagant at Yorktown, but its significance was overlooked. It is believed, because there was no libretto of the pagant to explain the background of the episodes.

Historians generally have supposed that Clinton was either a "dud" as a military leader or else that he was convinced Washington intended to attack him in New York. The American commander had written dispatches to this effect and had been careful to the British and had been intercepted by the British.

Where Students Spend

Their Leisure Time

Columbia: University Found Moving Pictures Were Greatest Attraction

The undergraduate student publication of Columbia University, The Spectator, recently questioned 308 typical students of that institution as to where they prefer to spend their leisure time. The information was desired because the many attractions of New York City tend to distract the attention of the students. The replies indicated that almost one-half of the students interviewed had never visited the American Museum of Natural History, in Central Park, probably the greatest scientific museum in America. On the other hand, all except 20 of the 308 had been to one or more of the big Broadway motion picture theatres.

Markets For Canadian Furs

Total Of $17,187,398 Worth Of Furs Exported Last Year

Great changes have come over the fur trade in Canada in recent years. The railway has revolutionized conditions wherever its influence reaches.

Vessels now ply the larger lakes and rivers. Canada has lost interest in new territory is eagerly sought as in the days prior to 1821. Increase in trapping and improved methods of capture, together with the advance of lumbering, mining and agricultural settlement, have driven fur-bearing animals farther and farther afield, and to conserve the fur resources of the country the provinces have found it necessary to enact laws to regulate the capture of fur-bearing animals and to provide for close season during certain periods of each year. The fur trade has assisted in meeting the demand for furs by popularizing common and previously despised furs and by encouraging the use of the fur of domestic animals.

Fur farming is playing an increasingly important part in the fur trade of Canada. The value of pelts of ranch-bred animals now representing about 12 per cent of the total annual value of the raw fur has increased to $1,000,000. The fox has proved the most suited for domestication, although other kinds of fur-bearers are being successfully raised in captivity—mink, raccoon, skunk, marten, fisher, muskrat and beaver.

The important markets for Canadian furs are London and New York; the trade tables for the twelve months ended June 30, 1926, show that of the total of $17,187,398 worth of raw furs exported, the British Isles received $9,453,322 and the United States, $6,727,456. At the close of the Great War, Montreal took a position as an international fur market, holding the first Canadian fur auction sale in 1920, when $48,345 pelts, valued at $5,067,114 were sold. The most recent figures show that at the auction sale held in Montreal during 1926 there were 2,328,977 pelts disposed of, with a total value of $5,287,400. Sales are also held at Winnipeg and Edmonton. An important industry in Canada in connection with the fur trade is that of the dressing and dyeing of furs.

Miles Of Wire On Liner
So great a wire does electricity play in a modern ship that the "Empress of Britain," and similar big liners have hundreds of miles of wire, reaching up the telephone, light, signalling, and power devices. Henceley Britisher's reach a length of 175 miles. But there are over 200 miles of electric wire in the vessel.

Wasted His Money

New York Man Lost Out On Costly 'Phone Call

The New Yorker, clever metropolitan weekly tells of one of its townsmen who had a friend an officer on the 83d Levittown. Reading a news item about the ship was due to be sold up to the city system when at her berth.

He was connected with the ship and asked for his friend. The officer came to the line and received an invitation out to dinner that night. The city man was annoyed when his friend scoffed at the invitation. "What's the matter?" he asked.

"We're still three hundred miles out at sea," came the amused reply. "The call cost twenty-one dollars. You've got to be careful how you handle these new inventions. Even a safety pin left unfastened can give you a nasty jab."

Looks as though France and Germany may have buried the hatchet. But the question remains—Have they forgotten where they buried it?

CAST IN A MODERN CRUISE DRAMA
Several of the pastes, through which it took the early explorers weeks to traverse the Rocky Mountains, are now the locations of splendid weather highways being placed in the National Parks Branch of the Department of the Interior. These mountain areas are just as grand and impressive as when first seen by Sir James Hector, David Thompson, and other great explorers who travelled these passes during the early part of last century.

Reaches More People
Rev. Dr. Gibson deplores the fact that half the churches of Toronto are not more than quarter filled on Sundays. This may be avoided, he feels, if people are less interested than they were in the things of the spirit. But if one takes into consideration the broadcasting of sermons the same conclusion may be reached that more people than ever are listening to the Sunday services.

Apples can be peeled easily if they are first steeped in boiling water for a minute. Tomatoes should be placed in a colander and boiling water poured over them before they are peeled.

Newspaper Has Large Place In Education

If Well-Edited Is Modern College Course Of Last Week

The place which newspapers might take in the education of children is suggested by a writer in the Midland Free Press. He believes that every school teacher who has charge of children more than ten years old should provide a copy of the school paper to reading newspapers to them and commenting without bias on the information they contain. There is no doubt that what is going on today will arouse more interest in a child than what went on in Greece and Rome centuries ago. No child should be allowed to grow up ignorant of the doings of the contemporary world. The writer says:

Today the well-edited newspaper is really a modern college. I know of no modern newspaper reader who is not well informed and intelligent. And I believe that by interesting children in the world and its ways early in their lives the school will help them to achieve a breadth of view and a habit of forming intelligent opinions that they would probably gain in no other way. Incidentally it will give them more alertness and keenness to learn and make the task of the teachers in the school a much less arduous one. The newspaper is a most useful knowledge to them for many ways.

The experience of business and professional men is that a large proportion of young people who may be accurate in arithmetic or skillful with the typewriter are lamentably ignorant of the current events. To extend their usefulness to their employers is lessened. NEW NATIONAL CABINET FORMED BY MACDONALD

London, Eng.—In his Leinstermouth retreat, Premier Ramsey MacDonald completed drafting his new National Cabinet. A cabinet of 20 replaces the emergency cabinet of 10.

It is as follows:

Prime Minister and First Lord of the Treasury, Rt. Hon. Ramsay MacDonald, National Laborite.

Lord President of the Council, Rt. Hon. Stanley Baldwin, Conservative.

Lord High Chancellor, Lord Sankey, National Laborite.

Lord Privy Seal, Rt. Hon. Philip Snowden, National Laborite.

Chancellor of the Exchequer, Rt. Hon. Neville Chamberlain, Conservative.

Secretary of State for Home Affairs, Sir Herbert Samuel, Liberal.

Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, Sir John Simon, Liberal.

Secretary of State for the Dominions, Rt. Hon. J. H. Thomas, National Laborite.

Secretary of State for the Colonies, Sir Philip Cunliffe-Lister, Conservative.

Secretary of State for War, Lord Halifax, Conservative.

Secretary of State for India, Sir Samuel Hoare, Conservative.

Secretary of State for Scotland, Sir Archibald Sinclair, Liberal.

Secretary of State for Air, Lord Lansdowne, Conservative.

First Lord of the Admiralty, Sir Bolton Eyres-Monsell, Conservative.

President of the Board of Trade, Rt. Hon. Walter Runciman, Liberal.

Minister of Health, Sir H. Hilton Young, Conservative.

President Board of Education, Sir Donald Maclean, Liberal.

Minister of Agriculture and Fisheries, Sir John Gilmour, Conservative.

Minister of Labor, Sir Henry Betton, Conservative.

First Commissioner of Works, Rt. Hon. William Ormsley-Gore, Conservative.

The National cabinet of 10—functioning before the general elections—was formed after the collapse of the Labor administration. It consisted of four Labor members, four Conservatives and two Liberals. The new National Government, reflecting to a certain extent the swinging changes which the general elections made in the composition of the House of Commons, includes the following: Ramsay MacDonald, Sir John Simon and four National Laborites.

The two key positions of Chancellor of the Exchequer and President of the Board of Trade go first to Neville Chamberlain, the second to Walter Runciman. The new National Government, replacing Philip Snowden, a free trader, who becomes Lord Privy Seal in succession to Lord Peel. At the opening of the new campaign at Birmingham, Mr. Chamberlain, referring to the adverse balance of trade, said: "The new National Government shall all be united in feeling there is no policy we can see that can be an effective substitute for the policy of protection of our home industries and for the maintenance of our home standards."

The holder of the other key position regarding trade policy, Mr. Runciman, has been a life-long free trader although, after the elections he declared his readiness to support an embargo against imported luxuries if he believed that step necessary to redress the balance of trade.

Sir Philip Cunliffe-Lister, who leaves the Board of Trade for the secretaryship of the colonies, also is a firm believer in protective tariffs. Sir Hilton Young, who has been promoted from Parliamentary Under-Secretary for the Board of Trade to Minister of Health, argued during a campaign meeting at Carlisle that no general low-revenue tariff of 10 per cent, or so would serve to stimulate the pound. "It must be," he said, "on the basis of 33 per cent."

Chicago, Ill.—Officials of the International Harvester Company announced that it has resumed active operation in all of the Canadian and United States plants. Several hundred men are back at work at wages ranging from 10 to 20 per cent. under the former rates.

Seniority rights, the officers said, will be observed in the re-employment and married men will be given preference. The new schedule of men's plants increasing the week to four days will affect approximately 20 plants.

Statistics Indicate Present Year Healthy

Cumulative Death Rate Both in U.S. and Canada 9.1 Per 1,000

Toronto, Ont.—The year 1931 has been an "exceptionally good health year, according to life insurance statistics, the cumulative death rate both in Canada and the United States being 9.1 per 1,000. This is approximately one per cent. in excess of that of 1930, when the minimum rate for all time was registered.

Mortality for heart disease is two per cent. higher than in 1930, tuberculosis is establishing a new minimum mortality record for all time, registering only 77 per 100,000 for the ten months, a decrease of 5.3 per cent. in the period of one year. Diphtheria death rate has declined 3.6 per cent. this year, a new low record. On the other hand, the cumulative rate for diabetes is considerably higher. The rate for cancer has also increased five per cent.

National War Memorial

Impressive Monument 90 Feet High To Be Erected At Ottawa

Ottawa, Ont.—Canada's national war memorial at Ottawa, which will be one of the most beautiful and impressive of its kind, is expected to be completed early next summer. Rapid progress is being made on the memorial, it is stated in reports from the architects, the Messers, the March Brothers and the St. Lawrence.

Ninety feet high, showing a colossal group of figures in bronze, depicting the heroism and self-sacrifice of the Canadian people, the memorial will stand in Confederation Park. Its erection will involve the removal of the city post office, the construction of a new railway post terminal, and a new arrangement of terminal vehicular traffic.

Resigns Judicial Post

Mrs. Emily Murphy Gives Up Position In Edmonton

Edmonton, Alberta.—The first woman to be appointed to such a post in the British Empire, Mrs. Emily Murphy, has resigned as justice of the peace, having been re-elected to the position of magistrate for the City of Edmonton, Park. Its extension will involve the removal of the city post office, the construction of a new railway post terminal, and a new arrangement of terminal vehicular traffic.

While resigning as an active police magistrate for the city of Edmonton, Mrs. Murphy will continue to serve on the juvenile court for the province of Alberta.

The retiring magistrate, widely known as "Janey Canuck" played an active part in the fight to have women recognized as eligible for appointment to the Canadian Senate.

Empire Central Bank

Clearing House For All Banks Of Empire Is Urged

London, Eng.—Creation of an Empire central bank to act as a clearing house for all central banks of the Empire is the chief recommendation of the report of the joint committee of the British and Canadian governments on the subject of the British Empire and the Empire Economic Union.

The report further suggests summoning of an Empire currency conference which might be able to establish a "pas-Britannica," built up out of the present muddle of the world's monetary affairs.

Relief For Stricken Areas

163 Car Loads Of Fruit And Vegetables Contributed By Five Provinces

Toronto, Ont.—Five provinces have contributed a total of 163 car loads of fruit and vegetables to meet needs of people in the drought-stricken area of southern Saskatchewan and part of southern Alberta. The cars have been dispatched under the auspices of the Emergency Relief Committee of the United Church of Canada.

The largest number, 38 cars, have been sent from Ontario. Central Alberta has contributed 15 carloads, mostly of mixed vegetables to aid destitute people in the southern part of that province. Manitoba has sent five carloads of mixed vegetables, while from British Columbia 12 carloads of fruit have been shipped. Northern Saskatchewan has sent two carloads of grain products to the affected area.

Each load is being distributed among 300 families, it is estimated.

Will Load Grain

Montreal.—Seventy-four steamers are scheduled to load grain in Montreal before the close of navigation. Another 40 or so are expected to load passenger and freight liners that will sail with part-cargoes of grain. The balance being shipped by steamers.

"RED" SECRETS ARE BARED BY POLICE OFFICER

Toronto, Ont.—For seven long years, a shabbily-dressed, stocky-looking German-Canadian acted as secretary of the Regina, Sask., branch of the Communist Party of Canada. For those seven years he shared the "innermost secrets" of the "legal" and "illegal" branches of the party, sat at the council seat, attended conventions, talked and corresponded with the leaders.

But this time, he had changed the ragged hand-me-downs for the scarlet and blue of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police. It was the first time in 10 years, his companion said, that he had worn the proud uniform of Canada's famous force.

His name was Sergeant John Leopold, of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

For seven years he had been secretary of the Regina branch of the Communist Party.

He had won the post through hard work.

While a member of the party he was known, not as Sergeant Leopold, but as E. W. Easewain.

He had entered the Communist Party in search of evidence to prove that it was an unlawful association, and that members of the party were parties to a seditious conspiracy.

The Communist Party in Canada, he testified, was a section of the Communist International since its formation. It had been represented at all congresses of the International in Russia. From 1921 to 1924 it was known as "The Workers' Party." But he said, there were two parties. One was the workers, which was intended to be legal. The second was the "illegal" or underground party. The parties were known as "A" and "B" parties respectively. "A" was the latter party which "carried on the illegal work of Communist International."

But in 1924, the "B" party, at the direction of the executive committee of the Communist International, came into the open, the witness declared. Then the workers became known as the Communist Party of Canada, while the underground party continued to be legal. Giving as the reason that the "illegal" party continued to be legal, he testified, it would not make much progress if it were not legal.

Every member who joined the party, Leopold continued, was sworn to a definite pledge to subordinate himself to the decisions and directions of the Communist International at Moscow, and the Communist Party of Canada, which was controlled by the Moscow body. This was shown, he claimed, in the constitution of the Canadian party, and also in the constitution of the Comintern (Communist International).

He outlined the work of the nucleus—the "foundation of the party." This nucleus, he said, was composed of two or more members of the party in every mine, shop, store, lumber camp, shipyard, factory or other industrial and commercial enterprise. The members of the nucleus were known to each other but not to the factory workers in general.

The main purpose of the party, he testified, was "to stir up discontent and strife; to foment and develop Conditions in southern Saskatchewan, parts of northern Manitoba, and certain dried-out sections of southern Alberta have been put before the people of Ontario in particular, with the result that, besides many carloads of vegetables and fruit for points in Saskatchewan, some 50 tons of second-hand clothing have been contributed through United Church organizations and sent west for distribution in the three prairie provinces. This work is continuing.

In Alberta practically all the surplus missionary funds are being used for the winter. By way of meeting the particular needs of the coming winter, the United Church missionaries at-large have been sent into northern Saskatchewan to minister to the large number of people who have moved into that area from the south, and three men have been similarly assigned to work among relief camps in various parts of the country.

One of the greatest difficulties in connection with changing into mixed farming has been the cost of buying cattle and seed. The government prevented many farmers this year from stocking their farms.

"Thank God," she heard him mutter. Then, aloud, reassuringly: "I've got my end of it all right. Now, can you catch hold of the strap and raise yourself a little so that I can reach you?"

Jean obeyed. A minute later she felt his arms about her shoulders, underneath her armpits, and then very slowly, but with a sure strength that took from her all sense of fear, he drew her safely up beside him on to the high ground.

For a moment they both rested quietly, recovering their breath. The Englishman seemed glad of the respite, and Jean, too, for the moment, concerned the rather drawn look of his face. She thought he must be more played out than he cared to acknowledge.

Across the silence of sheer fatigue their eyes met—Jean's filled with a wistful solicitude as unconscious as a child's, the man's curiously brilliant and inscrutable—and in a moment the silence had become something other, different, charged with emotional significance, the revealing silence which falls suddenly between a man and woman.

At last:
"This is what comes of stealing a day from Mrs. Grundy," commented the man dryly.

And the tension was broken.

He sprang up, as though anxious to maintain the recovered atmosphere of the commonplace.

"Come! Having shot her bolt and tried ineffectually to down you in a ditch, I expect the old lady will let us get home safely now. We're through the worst. There are more dire things between here and the hotel!"

Madame de Varigny, who might have spelt danger was past, and it only remained to follow the beaten track up to the hotel, though even so, with the wind and snow driving in their faces, it took them a good half-hour to accomplish the task.

Monsieur and Madame de Varigny, a distracted "maitre d'hotel," and a little crowd of interested and sympathetic visitors welcomed their arrival.

"Mon dieu, mademoiselle! But we rejoice to see you back!" exclaimed Madame de Varigny. "Our ourselves are only newly returned—and that, with difficulty, through this terrible storm—and we arrive to find that none knows where you are!"

"Me, I made sure that mademoiselle had accompanied Madame in a Constance," asserted Monsieur Vaintrout, nervously anxious to exculpate himself from any charge of carelessness.

"We were just going to organize a search-party," added the little Count. "I, myself—steadily—should have joined in the search."

Wearily as she was, Jean could hardly refrain from smiling at the idea of the diminutive Count in the role of a gallant preserver. He would have been considerably less well-qualified even than herself to cope with the drifting snow through which the sheer, dogged strength of the Englishman had brought her safety.

Instinctively she turned with the intention of effecting an introduction between the latter and the Varignys, only to find that he had disappeared. He had taken the opportunity presented by the little ferment of excitement which had greeted her safe return to slip away.

She felt oddly disconnected. And yet, she reflected, it was so like him—so like the conception of him which she had formed, at least—to evade both her thanks and the enthusiasm with which a recital of the afternoon's adventure would have been received.

CHAPTER VI.

The Magic Moment

Jean, surprisingly moved by a hot bath and a hot drink, and comfortably tucked up beside the fire in her room, was recounting the day's adventure to Madame de Varigny.

It was a somewhat expurgated version of the affair that she outlined, thoughtfully calculated to allay the natural apprehensions of a temporary chaperon—in the unknown Englishman figured innocuously as having come to her assistance when, in the course of her afternoon's tramp, she had been overtaken by the blizzard. Of the stolen day, matched from under Mrs. Grundy's enquiring nose, Jean preserved a discreet silence.

"I don't know who he could be," she pursued. "I've never seen him on the ice before! I should certainly have recognized him if I had. He was a lean, brown man, very English-looking, and of cold-club-type every morning effort, you know. Oh! And he had one perfectly white lock of hair that was distinctly attractive. It looked—descriptively—though someone had dabbed a powdered finger on his hair—just in the right place!"

Madame de Varigny's eyes narrowed, and a quick ejaculation escaped her. It was something more than a mere exclamation, containing interest; it held a definitely individual note, as though it sprang from some sudden and personal association.

Jean, hearing it, looked up in some surprise, and the other, meeting her questioning glance, rushed hastily to speech.

"A lock of white hair? But how chic! It should not—thoughtfully—" she began, hesitatingly.

"And he did not enlighten you as to his name?"

"No, indeed! He seemed to me to be a man of no distinctive characteristics."

"He is not staying in the hotel, at all events," said Jean. "He told me he was at a friend's chateau."

"And he did not enlighten you as to his name?"

"No, indeed! He seemed to me to be a man of no distinctive characteristics."

Jean shook her head, smiling a little to herself. It had been part of the charm of that brief companionship that neither of the two comrades knew any of the everyday, commonplace details concerning the other.

"Perhaps you will see him again at the rink, tomorrow evening," suggested Madame de Varigny, still with that note of restrained eagerness in her tone, which made Jean's heart beat.

"He has had it drifted; they will clear the ice in the morning."

Jean was silent. She was not altogether sure that she wanted to see him again. As it stood, robbed of all commonplace circumstances of convention, the incident held a certain glamour of whimsical romance which could but appeal to the daughter of Glyn Peterson. Nicely rounded off, as, for instance, by the unknown Englishman's prosaically calling at the hotel the next day to enquire whether she had suffered any ill effects, it would lose all the thrill of adventure. It was the suggestion of incompleteness which flavored the entire episode so pleasantly.

No, on the whole, Jean hoped that she would not meet the Englishman again—at least, not yet. Some day, perhaps, it might be rather nice if chance brought them together once more. There would be a certain interest in the romantic fitness about it, should that happen.

"I don't think I am likely to see him again," she said quietly, replying to Madame de Varigny's suggestion. "He told me he was going away tomorrow."

Had it been conceivable, Jean would have said that a flash of disappointment crossed the Countess's face. But there seemed no possible reason why the movements of an unknown Englishman should cause her any excitement of feeling whatever, pleasant or otherwise. The only feasible explanation was that old little streak of impulsiveness concerning other people's affairs which appeared to be characteristic of her and which she had believed evaded concerning the circumstances of Lady Anne Brennan. However curious she may have felt, however, on this occasion Madame de Varigny refrained from giving expression to it. Apparently dismissing the subject of the Englishman's identity from her mind, she switched the conversation into a fresh channel.

"It is unfortunate that you should have met with such a contretemps to-day. You will not feel disposed to dance this evening, after so much fatigue," she observed commiseratingly.

But Jean scouted the notion. With the incomparable resiliency of youth, she felt quite equal to dancing all night if need be.

"Mais tout au contraire!" she exclaimed. "I'm practically recovered—at least, I shall be after another half-hour's lazing by this glorious fire. I wonder what heaven-sent inspiration induced Monsieur Vaintrout to install a real English fire-place in this room? It's delicious!"

It was some time, shrugging her expressive shoulders,

Stormy Political Life

Ramsay MacDonald Has Had a Career

Reading Like Fiction

Ramsay MacDonald was elected in his own constituency, because the Prime Minister's "Ain folk" stood by him in the stormy hour of his stormy political career.

Born in a fisherman's cottage in Scotland, 64 years ago, Ramsay MacDonald has had a career reading like fiction. Friends, he went to London and for 10 years drank the bitterest waters of poverty, and a literary life. The death of his wife in 1911 was the saddest blow of his life.

Entering Parliament in 1906, Ramsay MacDonald became chairman of the Independent Labor Party. This was in the days when such a step was tantamount to social, if not political, exclusion. When the war opened he assisted the Government for having blundered into the conflict. Urging peace by negotiation, and despite his support for recruiting, MacDonald became an out-and-out pacifist and was shunned by all lines of war. He lost his seat in the Commons in 1918.

The turn of the political wheel brought MacDonald back to Parliament in the election of 1922 as head of the growing Labor Party. His pacifism was forgotten, if not forgiven. The wheel took another turn in Ramsay MacDonald's life. The Premier in January, 1924. After ten months of office, came opposition, until June, 1925, when he formed another government.

This lasted until last August, when MacDonald, Philip Snowden, James Thomas and ten other Laborites joined the Conservatives and a portion of the Liberal Party in forming the National Government. The people of Seaham placed their stamp of approval on the latest, if not the Ramsay MacDonald's last, by electing him to the House of Commons.

An Old That Is Prized Everywhere. Dr. Thomas' Electro-Oil was put upon the market without any flourish over fifty years ago. It was put up to meet the wants of a small section, but as soon as its merits became known it had a whole continent for a field, and it is now known and prized throughout this continent. There is nothing else to it.

Stream Flow Conditions On Prairies. During the month of August, the Dominion Water Power and Hydro-Electric Bureau, Department of the Interior, reports that stream flow conditions in southern Alberta and Saskatchewan continued to be extremely low. The flow of the Peace River, Alberta, however, has been improved, the flow of the Peace River being largely above the long term average for the month.

The Value Of Laughter

Good Aid To Health and Longevity

Says New York Pastor

Instead of telling us the mode of living, not usually applied with success to any other individual, by which he has attained to the age of 96 years, Dr. George Alexander, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of New York, says that when one is old he should "eat half as much, sleep twice as much, drink three times as much water and laugh four times as much."

This forward-looking wisdom, particularly happy when it comes from past the all-wise and three-score-and-seven, is supremely leavened by the last admonition. Much has been written of laughter. Some hold that it is the mark of the ill-mannered fool. Some count laughter the desperate alternative of tears. Yet others agree with Carlyle, though they often was, when he says in Sartor Resartus: "The man who cannot laugh is not only fit for treasons, stratagems and spots, but his whole life is already a treason and a stratagem."

One should begin early in the journey to laugh, let in his old age, even with laughter multiplied by four, he lacks a good proportion of mirth.

Declares More Armed Men In World To-Day Than In 1914, Before Outbreak Of Great War

Alerting information on world armaments was given by Hon. Hugh Guthrie, Minister of Justice and head of the Canadian delegation to the 12th assembly of the League of Nations. Twenty per cent of the aggregate amount of revenues of nations in the world today goes on armaments, Mr. Guthrie declared to a combined meeting of the League of Nations Society and the Women's Canadian Club at Ottawa. After all the efforts of the past 12 years there were more armed men in the world today than there were in 1914 before the war. Expenditures were greater. If, said Mr. Guthrie, danger of war because of large armaments existed in 1914, what should be said of conditions today?

This condition was the reason for the coming disarmament conference to be held in Geneva next February, continued the Minister of Justice. Right thinking people felt that there was danger of war and that the only step should be taken to remove this danger. If a start in the direction could be made next February, and progress have been accomplished, "But," said Mr. Guthrie, "I believe that security must precede disarmament in Europe."

The Minister of Justice spoke on the subject of "present problems of the League of Nations." Having returned from Geneva only a short time ago, he was familiar with proceedings at the 12th assembly, and he outlined for his listeners what had been accomplished by the representatives of the 52 nations present. Disarmament, he said, had overachieved all other subjects discussed. A draft agreement had been prepared for submission to the disarmament conference in February, and he considered it a model document.

Railway Board Ruling

A Surcharge Is Set On Express Rates To United States

A surcharge amounting to 50 per cent of the rate of exchange between Canadian and United States currency rates, by the Board of Railway Commissioners. The order becomes effective at once. This brings the express rates into line with the freight rates. A surcharge having been placed on these several weeks ago.

Refusal of the United States express companies to accept payment in anything but United States funds was the reason for the imposition of the surcharge.

As To Names

Found That Mary Is the Favorite Among Women's Names In England

Careful statistics have been collected by a man in England as to names, from which it is realized that John is the favorite Christian name in that country, followed by Thomas, William, Richard and Robert, in that order. Mary is the favorite among women's names, and during the past hundred years sixty-eight girl babies out of every thousand have been christened Mary. Ellen, Sarah, Anne, Jane and Ellen come next among girls' names, or did so up to the date of the Great War.

Woman Reptile Expert Dead

Miss Joan B. Proctor, Curator of reptiles at the London Zoo, one of England's most distinguished zoologists, has died. Miss Proctor, who was 34, would handle the most dangerous reptiles with a fearlessness which astonished on-time menagerie people. Surgeons were amazed at the ease in which she would handle any snake, the head of a cobra or a rattlesnake without displaying a sign of fear.

"Is your husband a man of rare gifts?" asked the old school teacher. "He must be," replied the sweet bride. "He only gave me one present—only one—just one."

International Peace Garden

Turtle Mountain Site Has Been Selected By Committee

The international peace gardens will be located in the Turtle Mountain site in Manitoba. The final selection of this site has been made by the international committee and is now approved by all American and Canadian bodies having the question of a site under consideration.

The Turtle Mountain site is on the international boundary, partly in Manitoba and partly in North Dakota. In September the National Association of Gardeners at their convention at Asbury Park, N.J., approved the site, but final decision rested with the International Peace Garden Commission and the executives of the Canadian Association of Florists and Gardeners and the National Association of Gardeners.

Two sections of land are to be donated by the Manitoba Government and a similar area by the state of North Dakota. The plan calls for planting the garden with flowering plants, trees and shrubbery representative of both nations.

It is proposed to raise a fund of $50,000 to maintain the garden in perpetuity as a token of the unbroken friendship between Canada and the United States. While means of raising the money have not been settled, the international committee is soliciting a collection of contributions from school children in all parts of Canada and the United States.

Good Advice To Follow

Live Right and Whether Future Life Exists Does Not Matter

Relatively few people reach a state of mind which enables them to say with the late Thomas A. Edison, "It is life hereafter, or if there is none, it does not matter." Most men today live either in an earnest hope or dire dread of immortality. Or, if they dissent from the general belief in life after death, still cold comfort is the prospect of annihilation.

Few of us are wise enough and strong enough to live as we believe we ought to be lived and then remain content to let the question of a future existence take care of itself. Few of us are able to keep before our minds the acute realization that talk, speculation, argument and desire are utterly impotent to change the fact about the existence of immortality, and that the best we can do is to order our ways so that in the event of an awaiting hereafter, there is nothing to be lost by a life of proper preparation for possible eventualities, and there may be much to be gained. And as certainly, if the order of the universe contains no provision for resurrection of man there will be no regret, for we never will know that we labored in vain.

Unnecessary Rebuff

Upon reaching home, after his lengthy trip, Lindbergh was asked by a reporter, "How does it feel to be in the United States again?" and he made answer, "I beg to be excused from saying anything at this time." If Lindy had simply responded "good" he would have saved a lot of time and avoided a rebuff to a man who was merely attending to his job.

Science Of Farming

Instruction Necessary For Farmer To Keep Down Costs

Advancement of agricultural policies with greater diversification of products and lowering of interest rates were urged by Premier J. E. Brownlie in an address at Calgary to the young men's section of the Board of Trade.

"The knowledge of the science of farming was urged by the premier, declaring that instruction was necessary, if the farmer were to keep down costs and produce the best quality of grain."

"In addition, the farmer should not be expected to carry on against interest rates which are so much higher than in other businesses. I believe that the Canadian people have sufficient ingenuity to devise a plan, whereby a central organization could act as a financial buffer for the farmer on the one hand, and the banks on the other," he declared.

Greater care in land settlement programs was urged as a step to avoid difficulties of the future. Dealing with the economic situation generally, the premier said that employment was still one of the greatest problems in the Dominion. No man could dispute the justice of the government's standard of life among his fellowmen, whether unemployed or not, but the abilities of governments should be taken into consideration, he said.

Higher Wheat Prices

Looks For Wheat To Sell At Price More In Line With Cost Of Other Commodities

Predicting that the price of wheat would rise to $1.10 or $1.12 per bushel to be in line with the price of other commodities, Professor A. M. Shaw, dean of agriculture of the University of Saskatchewan, expressed the opinion at a Kiwanis dinner in Regina, that western Canada, for years to come would have to look upon wheat as its main saleable product.

In dealing with matters of agriculture, particularly as they influence western Canada, Dean Shaw said that it was to the export market that western Canada had to look for the solution of its difficulties. He claimed that it was the export market that was being cut at all times to influence the price of the agricultural commodity. He regretted the presence of so many types of wheat now grown in Saskatchewan, citing this as one of the reasons why the grade of wheat raised in western Canada was not always in a standard. Canadian wheat on the market of the world is at a premium, he said, and he urged that everything possible be done to prevent degrading through the mixing of low quality wheat.

A Feasible Route

Churchill Route Is Considered Favorable By Sea Captain

The shipment of grain and other cargoes through the Hudson Strait from Canada's new northern harbor, Churchill, to European ports is a feasible, according to Captain W. J. Balcom, commander of the Canadian Government ice-breaker, "N. B. McLean," who returned to Quebec after spending three and a half months patrolling Hudson Strait.

Captain Balcom said that the two grain boats, the "Farnworth" with 7,410 tons of wheat and the "Warkworth" with 7,172 tons, were both escorted through the strait from Cape Chidley to Coates Island, at the eastern extremity of the strait, on their trip to the Old Country. No trouble was experienced and the owners of the two vessels had already received their full cargoes.

McLean's return to the strait this season have been the best in many years. "McLean's" commander stated, very little field ice being encountered, though quite a few bergs were sighted. The first snowfall came on September 16.

Stephen Lake age 90, has been engaged in cutting the fallen limbs into firewood. The wishing tree has long been a landmark in the County of Prince Edward and thousands of tourists have stopped under its spacious branches to make a wish. Historians claim that the tree is about 700 years old, and several novels have been written about it.

The Desert Of Reading

Description Dr. Locke Gives For Book Of Fiction

"Fiction is the intellectual equivalent to a piece of pie which balances the textbook diet of the average college student," stated Dr. George H. Locke before a large gathering of the Victoria Women's Association and a number of undergraduates of the college in the library of Annesley Hall, Toronto, the occasion being the formal opening of the Cassie Walker Tackles Book Room for Reading.

"Read a book of fiction every month," Dr. Locke advised the students, "and don't let anybody persuade you that fiction is a bad thing. In fiction you will find the expression of style which you cannot get out of copying a passage from the Encyclopedia Britannica."

New National Viewpoint

Canadian Writers Of Fiction Should Portray Scenes Of Our Own Country

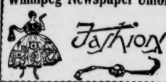

Some sound advice was given to Canadian authors recently by John Burroughs, the well known English essayist. While he finds our picture of a surprisingly high average, he deprecates the lack of Canadian locales. He thinks the Canadian writer allows himself to be distracted by London and New York, to the detriment of his own country, when it comes to background and settings for stories, and that it would be better to portray the Canadian scene and situations.

There is no doubt whatever that Mr. Burroughs has put his hand upon a real need. There are very few novels about Canada and the people of Canada—novels that would convey to people outside Canada a clear idea of the Dominion, its inhabitants, their ideals, their methods, their mentality. Yet that is the sort of novel we need if our fiction is to become national in anything more than the publisher's imprint.

Mr. Burroughs sees a new national viewpoint and new standards of judgment needed for the young writers of this country. Doubtless both will come in time, but the present tendency is rather away from Canada and the national viewpoint than towards such an ideal. Our poets get much too strong for a good many Canadian writers, who might have done a good service to Canadian literature had they been able to withstand that lure. Criticism, such as Mr. Burroughs has offered, is, therefore, all the more to be noted as pungent and appropriate.

The Antidote For Fear

Courage, Confidence and Hope Needed By World Today

The curse of humanity has always been fear.

Fear dates back to the beginning of man.

Fear is the mother of hatred, the instigator of murder, the begetter of war.

Fear is the enemy of sanity, the spoiler of judgment, the dealer of the soul.

Fear turns day into night and makes men walk in darkness.

Fear is the forerunner of distress, the foe to prosperity, the preserver of life.

As individuals and as a nation we should cast fear from us.

Courage, confidence, hope—these are the antidotes—and the world has great need of them today.

It is the thing that halts progress and creates difficulties, makes people hesitate where courage would see them through.

Tender-handed stroke a nettle, And it stings you for your pains; Grip it like a man of manly spirit, And so will silk remain.

Disagrees With Einstein

Retreating Stars Determine Size Of Universe Opinion Of Dutch Astronomer

The stars, constantly retreating toward the limitless rim of the Milky way, are the factors that determine the size of the universe, says Professor Willem de Sitter, noted Dutch astronomer. He spoke on "The size of the universe" in the Frick Chemical Laboratory of Princeton, New Jersey, University.

The universe is of a definite size and it is finite, Dr. de Sitter declared, but it is continually expanding, because of the retreat of the stars which broadens the limits of the universe.

Dr. de Sitter's exposition is at variance with the theory of Albert Einstein, the German mathematician. Einstein's static theory has the universe starting at a certain size and increasing to become an infinite. After an initial postulate that the whole of space was first filled homogeneously with matter, Einstein arrived at the conclusion that the universe must expand with no motion.

To this hypothesis Dr. de Sitter compared his own theory of a finite original universe having no matter, only motion. Its size has constantly increased, the professor said, but it still remains finite—or limited.

Attacks Current War Stories

Canadian Soldiers Not Moral Dregs

Lieut.-Col. George A. Drew, who has an unblemished record as the centre of the stage as the defender of Canadians in the Great War, assumes his familiar role again.

Soldiers and officers are not such moral weaklings as they are pictured in current war stories. There is no doubt that Col. Drew speaks truth, and also that his indignation at the tone of some modern works of "literature" is justified.

Too many writers, who are on the verge of "revelation," have put too much stress on happenings which, though probably genuine, do not truly reflect the life of the soldier in any comprehensive way. They have shown only one side of the picture, and in doing so have been guilty of a great injustice.

Many of the books now on the shelves are entirely too much stress on happenings which, though probably genuine, do not truly reflect the life of the soldier in any comprehensive way. They have shown only one side of the picture, and in doing so have been guilty of a great injustice.

PAUL IN JERUSALEM

Golden Text: "Thou shalt be a witness for Him unto all men of what thou hast seen and heard."—Acts 22, 15.

Lesson: Acts 21:17 to 23:30.

Devotional Reading: 2 Corinthians 12:1-10.

Explanations and Comments

Paul's Reception At Jerusalem Verses 17-19.—The leaders of the Church at Jerusalem received Paul cordially. James was in the company that greeted him, but Peter seems not to have been present. Paul came to them with a wonderful story of how the gospel message had been received among the Greek Jews and Gentiles, and with abundant proof of their regard for the Mother Church in the collection which they had contributed out of their deep poverty.

It is evident that Paul had thought this gathering of contributions from his Gentile churches to be "the crowning act," as Professor Ramsay declares, of his work in the four Gentile provinces of Galatia, Asia, Macedonia, and Achaia. Yet there is no mention of any expression of gratitude on the part of the receivers. The omission is pathetic to one who has followed with intense interest Paul's work.

Apparently the apostles and elders of Jerusalem passed at once to what was uppermost in their own minds. The theological and theoretical considerations of the Christian group as they have done all the time since the apostles' day.

A somewhat similar spirit reigned among the representatives of the church in England in 1847, a few years since. Missionaries were eager to discuss their work and successes, but the high Churchmen said, "Brothers, we hear that you have received from your Communion missionaries who do not belong to our sect."

Missionaries were eager to discuss their work and successes, but the high Churchmen said, "Brothers, we hear that you have received from your Communion missionaries who do not belong to our sect."

Canada Well Governed

With Ten Million Population Has 109 More Members Than Britain

In the British House there are 615 members, and the strange thing is that in the House itself there is not seating accommodation for slightly more than 400. Britain has the one central government; there is nothing which compares to our provincial system of rule, and although it is appears to be a fairly formidable number of parliamentarians it is not so great as the number which we have in Canada.

Counting the Federal and Provincial bodies in Canada we find this result:

Ottawa	245
Alberta	62
British Columbia	58
Manitoba	55
New Brunswick	48
Nova Scotia	47
Ontario	112
Prince Edward Island	30
Quebec	108
Saskatchewan	30
Total	814

So Canada with its ten million population has 199 more governing members than Britain with its population of 47,000,000.

How To Forecast Weather

Missouri Prophet Says It Always Runs In

Buffalo's mystery man, baseball prophet has a rival at Macon, Missouri, in a farmer, unknown to fame, who says this business of weather forecasting is a simple matter if you keep tab of the first ten days of each three-month cycle.

He submitted his scheme, with a challenge, to W. C. Brown, chief of the weather bureau there. He suggested that Brown junk his rain gauges and barometers and adopt his system.

Weather during the first ten days of each three-month cycle indicates what will happen during those months, he contends. His cycles begin in January, April, July and October.

Increase in The World's Wheat Consumption Indicates The Grain Industry Has Promising Future

Strengthening wheat prices and improved demand for that cereal indicate that the international situation is clarifying and the two-year decline in prices is at an end. The economic depths to which wheat prices had the direct result of reducing acreage to the extent of some 14,000,000 acres in Canada, United States, Australia and Argentina, and weather conditions have created a further reduction in production so that it now seems apparent that the world's surplus will be drastically reduced before the end of the crop year.

The world movement of wheat for the present crop year has averaged around 16,250,000 bushels weekly. This demand is running higher by a million and a quarter bushels weekly than the early estimates of Mr. Brownhill, well known British wheat authority. The healthy demand is due to low carryovers in importing countries and the comparatively poor quality of the current European crop. Non-European countries have purchased nearly 29,000,000 bushels of wheat so far this crop year, which is 14,000,000 bushels greater than the purchases for the same period last year.

At the present time the attention of millers and traders is centred in the United States' winter wheat area. There is no doubt that the wheat prospect there is not so encouraging as a large production is concerned. The official estimate of winter wheat needing to be sold is about a month and a half, but private observers predict at least a 16 per cent. reduction in acreage. Last year's United States' winter wheat area averaged 19 bushels to the acre, on 40,000,000 acres. Winter killing was comparatively trivial because of the dry condition of the crop as it went into the winter, and the favorable winter weather. The crop this year went into the winter season under very poor conditions and greater winter killing may be anticipated.

On the whole, the world wheat picture looks a lot brighter at the present time. Dealers show a confidence in the wheat market that has not been seen in years. There is always more inclination to buy on a rising market than in the face of falling prices. In spite of all that has been said and written about the world's wheat surplus released by the Dominion Government show that there has been a decided increase in the world's wheat consumption. In the 10-year period from 1921 to 1931, the annual disappearance of wheat has increased by some 700,000,000 bushels. This would lead to the assumption that the wheat industry still has a promising future and that as the years go by the prairies of Western Canada will be called upon more and more to supply the world's daily bread—Calgary Herald.

Japan Making Progress

People Seem Determined To Be Up-To-Date
Japan is determined to be "in" all the modern movements, and the latest reports from that land of cherry-blossom show that the young ladies of Nippon have taken up hiking. The Japanese maidens, the Summer School of Oriental Culture at Tokyo, was recently informed, "still venerate Mount Fuji, but they are quite capable of climbing it with knapsacks on their backs." Japanese professional men, too, are determined to be in the swim. When representatives of the world's dentists met at Paris recently, they were astonished at the big strides the Japanese had made in dental science.

Overseas Immigration Offices Reorganization To Be Expected In The Interests Of Economy and Efficiency

As a move in the interests of administration, economy, and efficiency, the offices of the Department of Immigration and Colonization in the British Isles are to be completely reorganized with the likelihood that they will be concentrated in the larger cities only. Hon. W. A. Gordon, Minister of Immigration and Colonization, announced that it was the opinion of the Department that the offices in the British Isles had been greatly overstaffed. The reorganization, he said, might mean that some of the offices would be closed and others enlarged.

No details of the plan were given, but it was understood the changes would be made very shortly, probably before the end of the year.

Activities of the department in British Isles and Europe are under the direction of W. R. Little, and offices are maintained, at present, in London, Liverpool, Glasgow, Belfast, Dublin, Bristol and York. It is believed that in the event some of the offices will be closed, the concentration point will be in London, Liverpool, Glasgow and either Belfast or Dublin.

With the general restriction of immigration to Canada from the British Isles and Europe, the overseas offices have been less concerned with handling the highly selective type of farm settlers and those fulfilling certain requirements for particular localities in this country. Their work has been mainly educative with lectures, lantern slides and motion pictures of Canadian life, motor caravan exhibitions, distribution of literature and advertising.

No Treasure Discovered

Trunks Of Eccentric Woman Contained Spent Bullets
The search for treasure in the sixty-five trunks stored by Mrs. Ida Wood, 93-year-old eccentric in the Mahanah, Storage Co., Seventh Avenue and Second Street, New York, resulted in the discovery of no diamonds, bank notes, nor bonds, but it had produced a mass of soap bearing the names of the world over.

Three trunks had been opened. They contained linen, towels, blankets and soap. The Ocean House at Newport, the Hotel Leland at Narragansett Pier, the Windsor at Jacksonville, the Clinton at Philadelphia and other hotels in Europe and United States, some of which long have been razed to the ground, were among the towels also bore hotel names. Otto F. Wood, Mrs. Wood's nephew, recently appointed as guardian, directed the opening of the trunks. He said that inasmuch as Mrs. Wood had not kept house since 1876 most of the things so far found had been in the trunks for more than half a century.

The trunks themselves traced the history of trunk manufacture. Some of them dated from before the Civil War, and were little more than canvas covered crates. Others were heavy iron chests with complicated locks.

An Engineering Feat

Wonderful feat at Parma, Italy, of railway engineering has been performed in the laying of a 240 foot iron bridge on the line between Parma and Spezia, in 12 minutes. The bridge, which weighed 350 tons, was placed in position in the interval between the passage of two trains and traffic was not interrupted with.

New York and London

Competition Over Population Might Have Better Results In Other Fields

We are rather bored with the periodic squabble over whether New York or London is actually the largest city in the world. Even though Dr. Joseph A. Hill, Acting Census Director, now declares that the issue has been settled in our favor and produces two sets of figures to prove this point, we are not greatly impressed. It is an honor in which we are uninterested and except for sympathy for London, nothing would please us better than to discover in the next census figures that New York's population had shrunk to half that of the British capital. If there is to be competition between New York and London, there are other fields in which it might be productive of more significant results. On such matters as homicide, motor accidents, noise abatement, public facilities, municipal cleanliness, traffic regulations, public schools and many other municipal phenomena, not excluding official corruption, a little rivalry between New York and London might be a good thing. It is unfortunate that the one aspect of this rivalry in which we are so keen to delight in presenting comparisons with London is our size. Perhaps it is a confession of weakness.—New York Evening Post.

Passes Twenty-First Birthday

Safety Glass Discovered By French Chemist In 1910

This year is virtually the 21st birthday of safety-glass, for it was in 1910 that the patent now most generally used was filed. The inventor was Edouard Benedictus, a French chemist of Dutch origin, who had an experimental laboratory in Paris. One day he dropped a bottle to the stone floor, and although it was shattered, inside like a crystal it did not break. He remembered that it had contained a mixture of various chemicals which had evaporated and coated the interior with a transparent enamel. Benedictus noted the formula, and realized that on his shelf lay the secret of unshattered glass. The patent was filed in 1910. The first automobile to be equipped with Despeck, the toughest promoter motorist, took up the idea that safety-glass was manufactured.

New Regulations

Plan For Safety Of Stevedores In Vancouver Harbor Is Presented

A set of new regulations governing the working conditions of those employed loading and unloading vessels in Vancouver harbor, designed to provide greater safety for the stevedores, has been presented for approval of the Minister of Marine by J. B. Thompson, chairman of the Vancouver harbor commission. Question of the competency of the Vancouver harbor commission to enact and enforce these regulations is being studied by the Department of Marine, and a decision will be made shortly.

Heavy Hoods Hang Low

So those men who have tried and sounded all things and discovered nothing solid and firm, have quitted their presumption and acknowledged their natural condition.

An Earthquake A Day

Italy Has More Than Its Share Of Shocks

Earthquakes shiver up and down the Apennine range because of Italy at the rate of more than one a day, or an average of 433 a year. Professor Palmieri, head of the weather bureau in Rome, who receives and classifies the 'quake reports, has come to the conclusion that earth-shocks prefer some months of the year and some hours of the day. July is the favorite month; then come August, September and January. Earthquakes choose to break their havoc at night rather than in the day. The favorite hours are between midnight and 4 o'clock in the morning.

Western Fair Dates

Canadian and British Talent May Be Engaged To Supply Attractions
Western Canada Fair Association members, at a meeting in Saskatoon, decided that, as far as possible, Canadian or British artists would be engaged to supply attractions at summer fairs through western Canada in 1932.

While no decision as to attractions was arrived at, it is understood that several offers have been received from British bands and British vaudeville artists seeking engagements for next year. All managers and delegates attending the meeting pressed their desire that only Canadian or British Empire artists should appear on the program next summer. A considerable part of the time of the meeting was taken up with the discussion of ways and means for adopting economies which would not impair the efficiency of the fairs.

Dates of summer fairs for next year were set: Brandon, August 10 to 17; Regina, August 17 to 24; Calgary, August 24 to 31; Edmonton, August 31 to September 7; Saskatoon, September 7 to 14; Regina, September 14 to 21; Brandon, September 21 to 28; Saskatoon, September 28 to October 5; and Edmonton, October 5 to 12.

Winter fair dates agreed on were: Brandon, starting March 14; Regina, March 21; Saskatoon and Calgary, March 28; and Edmonton, April 4.

Recommends Central Bank For Empire

Would Act As Clearing House For All Banks

A joint committee appointed by the Federation of British Industries and the Empire Economic Union, to examine the financial and currency policy of the empire, recommended the creation of a central bank to act as a clearing house for all banks of the British Empire.

The report further suggests summing of an empire currency conference which might be able to establish a "pax-Britannica" built up out of the present money of the world's monetary affairs.

Says Cancellation Of Taxes Impossible

Premier Anderson Warns Saskatchewan Residents That Municipal Taxes Cannot Be Wiped Out

"There is no manner whereby taxes can be wiped out or dispensed with," declared Hon. J. T. M. Anderson, Premier of Saskatchewan, in a recent statement which he warned against the assumption, in some sections of the province, that taxes due rural municipalities would be cancelled. Inability of the municipalities to collect taxes, he said, could result in the discontinuance or curtailment of essential municipal services, while continuing under government control would virtually mean abolition of local self-government without any release from taxation. The full text of the statement, which is a significant and important one in the present juncture, follows:

"The Government has received many letters having to do with the payment of taxes. Some of our correspondents suggest that there is a feeling abroad in some rural districts that a large percentage of the taxes due to rural municipalities by the taxpayers should be cancelled or wiped out in some manner. It is pointed out that this feeling is having a very bad effect on tax collections.

"A little consideration will show that such a course of action is impossible. There is no manner whereby taxes can be wiped out or dispensed with. The taxes paid by our people to their municipalities are spent on five main items:

1. To maintain the schools.

2. To assist in operating our sanatoria.

3. To pay for municipal telephone debtors.

4. To pay interest and principal payments due on indebtedness owing by municipalities.

5. To pay for municipal hall insurance where same exists.

"Taxes are levied to maintain these services because the ratepayers of each municipality voted in favor of having these services. It is agreed that a considerable number of the rural municipalities are incurring with debt on account of their expenditures for relief purposes, but it must be remembered that these relief expenditures were exceptional as the times are exceptional.

"If municipalities cannot collect their own taxes because of a disinclination of its residents to pay them, then these services which their own ratepayers voted in favor of having cannot be carried on. It has been suggested that they should still be carried on by the Government taking over the administration of same. If this were done, it would mean the abolition of local self-government and would not decrease the taxes of the ratepayers in these rural areas of the province. Money would have to be found to maintain such services, whether found by the rural municipal councils or by the Provincial Government. These monies could come from one source and from no other source, and that is from the pockets of the people and from no other place.

"We are living in serious times. Municipalities and that although their revenues are decreasing their obligations remain the same and, in some instances, have increased. It is too late to say that while we need these services some one else has to pay for them, particularly when we ourselves have failed for these services. If these difficult times have one lesson for us it is that services are not free. They must be paid for. We are now confronted with the unpleasant duty of paying for these services which we must pay for by means of our taxes. There is no other way.

"What is true of taxes is true of other legitimate accounts. When it is within the power of the debtor to make reasonable payments, then reasonable payments should be made."

Getting More Orders

Shipments of British Columbia canned tomatoes from Kamloops to Hong Kong dealers, made with the co-operation of provincial authorities, has resulted in repeat orders for the product. It was announced by Hon. William Aikman, Minister of Agriculture, that the initial shipment sold readily and at prices held to be satisfactory.

Explanations and Comments

Rome At Last, verse 16. While still in Ephesus Paul declared that after he had been to Jerusalem he must see Rome. Little did he realize that more than three years, packed with surprising happenings, would elapse before he reached Rome in chains. He "must see Rome." Just as the cohorts and representatives of the Roman government and the merchants of the Roman trade went out to all the world along the far-reaching network of Roman roads, so Paul expected the message of Christ and His triumphant reign to go out over those same roads to the last corner of the Roman world.

Rome was the great climax of Paul's work, and of Luke's history. In his eagerness which he shared with the apostle in achieving their long-desired goal, Luke inserts in his account a "double arrival." In verse fourteen he says, "So we came to Rome," and again in verse sixteen, "And when we entered into Rome." Paul was shown much leniency during his stay in Rome. Possibly the good report of Festus and Agrippa concerning the prisoner had sent them gave Paul an advantage, and without doubt Julius, the centurion whom Paul had helped on the voyage, interceded for him. Instead of being kept in the dungeons of the Praetorian camp Paul was allowed to live in his own lodging, and to have with him one soldier to guard him, and to whom he wrote his letters. He often alludes to the chains in his letters, as he does to the prisoners of Rome who were sent to visit him, verse 20. See 2 Timothy 1:16; Colossians 4:3; Philimon 1:1; Ephesians 6:20.

There was a frequent change of soldiers, and thus Paul had an opportunity of spreading his message widely by the Praetorian guard. Philippians 1:13, Paul says that his bonds had enabled him to preach Christ "throughout the whole Praetorian guard."

There is a story on Paul's wrist was his message, and he could write to the Philippians, "I have you to know that the things which have happened to me have fallen out rather to the progress of the gospel." Handicaps are not counted just handicaps, or capital on which to do the business in hand. It is a great art to make one's predicament one's tools, the very instrument of one's success. Every one knows how Bunyan turned Bedford Jail into Pilgrim's Progress.

Holding Semi-Annual Line Stock Survey

Domestic Bureau Of Statistics Announces Change In System

A new livestock survey to be undertaken by the Dominion Government, particularly of breeding and marketing intentions, on December 1 of this year, it has been announced by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics. Since 1917, an annual survey has been made in June, in co-operation with the provincial governments, and in future years it is intended to conduct a dual survey basis as at June and December 1, and thus secure a perspective of the livestock industry every six months.

In every province, except British Columbia, cards will be distributed to farmers through the rural schools. In British Columbia, the cards will be mailed direct to farmers for their attention. In certain areas of Alberta and Saskatchewan where rural schools are not organized, the livestock associations have co-operated in providing mailing lists so that the ranchers may be reached directly. The cards will be distributed during the latter half of November.

Brazil expects to adopt an eight-hour day and 48-hour week.

Fish meal makes an excellent food for cattle, swine and poultry.

Saskatchewan Salt Well

Said To Be The Deepest Salt Well In The World

Recent developments at the Simpson Oil Company Well, 88 miles northwest of Regina, and about 200 miles west of Simpson, have resulted in giving to Saskatchewan the deepest well in the world, 3,445 feet deep, with a brine that comes out of it 95 per cent. pure, and producing a salt with a saturation of 23 per cent. A small demonstration plant installed at the well has produced some excellent salt.

In 1926 a company was organized for the purpose of drilling for oil or gas in the Simpson field. Drilling started that year, and in 1931 the well had reached a depth of 3,445 feet when a flow of brine was struck.

Officials of the company have examined the possibilities for the sale of salt in Regina and report that Regina alone consumes six million tons of salt every year.

With the production of salt from this well, there opens another possibility, the development of the fish canning industry in the northern hinterland, where no attempt has been made to operate because of the high cost of salt. It is also used in meat curing and with the opening of the large mineral belt in the north, directors of the company express the hope that smelters will be enabled to refine the metals where they are mined.

The company plans to erect a modern salt refining plant at the well, and next spring to start another oil well two miles east of the site of the oil well, where geologists say the top of the salt is located. In the meantime salt will be produced for commercial purposes.

You are wonderful—You English! If it had been I who had experienced your adventure today, I should be in it ceasing—this fat, non-Yoyotte, shall leave you to rest a little!

She nodded smilingly and left the room. Once in the corridor outside, however, the smile vanished as though had been wiped off her face by an unseen hand. Her curving lips settled into a hard, inflexible line, and the soft, disarming dark eyes grew suddenly sombre and brooding.

She passed swiftly along to her own suit. It was empty. The little Count was downstairs, agreeably occupied in comparing symptoms with a fellow health care he discovered.

With a quick sigh of relief at his absence she flung herself into a chair and a cigarette, smoking rapidly and exhaling the smoke in quick nervous jerks. The long, plant fingers which held the cigarette were not quite steady.

"Tout va bien," she muttered restlessly. "All goes well. Assurance, his punishment will come." She bent her head. "Que Dieu le veuille!" she whispered passionately.

Jeau took a final and not altogether displeased survey of herself in the mirror before descending to the big "salon" where the fancy-dress ball was to be held. She had had her dinner served to her in her room so that she might rest the longer, and now, as there came wafted to her ears the preliminary grunts and squeals and snatches of melody of the hotel orchestra in process of tuning up, she was conscious of a pleasant glow of anticipation.

There was nothing strikingly original about the conception of the ball. It represented "Artism," and had been designed for a fancy-dress ball for more than a year ago—before the death of Jacqueline had suddenly shattered down all gaiety and mirth at Sherbrooke. But, simple as it was, it had been carried out, and before the death of Jacqueline had suddenly shattered down all gaiety and mirth at Sherbrooke. cushion and dozed, at the back of her mind the faintly disturbing thought that she was cutting a Roman senator's dance.

Presently she stirred a little, hastily aware of some disquiet that was pushing itself into her consciousness. The discomfort grew, crystallizing at last into the feeling that she was no longer alone. For a moment she lay inertly unwilling to be disturbed, she tried to disregard it, but it persisted, and she thought to strengthen it, the recollection of the defrauded senator came back to her with increased insistence.

Broad awake at last, she opened her eyes. Someone—the senator presumably—was standing at the entrance to the little alcove, and she rushed into consciousness—stricken speech.

"Oh, have I cut your dance? I'm so sorry."

She broke off abruptly, realizing as she spoke that the intruder was not, after all, the senator come to claim his dance, but a stranger wearing a black mask and domino. She was sure she had not seen him before among the dancers in the "salon," and for a moment she stared at him bewildered and even a little frightened. Vague stories she had heard of a "hold-up," by masked men at some fancy-dress ball recalled themselves disagreeably to her memory, and her pulse quickened at the thought.

Then, quite suddenly, she knew who it was. It did not need even the evidence of that look of "pounce," hair above the mask he wore, just visible in the dim light of the recess, to tell her. She knew. And with the knowledge came a sudden, disturbing sense of shy tumult.

She half-rose from the divan. "You?" she stammered nervously. "Is it you?"

He whipped off his mask. "Who else? Did this deceive you?"

"I thought the strip of velvet from his finger, and regarding him with quizzical grey eyes. 'I've been thinking of you everywhere. I'd almost made up my mind that you had come to bed like a good little girl. And then my patron saint—or was it the special devil told off to look after me? I wonder?'—prompted me to look in. 'Et vous vola, mademoiselle! How are you feeling after your experience in the money?'

He spoke very rapidly, in a light half-mocking tone that seemed to him, as he made the happenings of the afternoon unreal and remote. His eyes were very bright, almost dazzling in the expression—holding a suggestion of the expression of the woman who had looked supremely handsome as Cleopatra. Jeau reflected that her eyes—slumberous and profound, with their dusky frame of lashes and that strange implacability she always seemed to have—might very well have been the eyes of the Egyptian queen herself.

The "salon" was filling up rapidly. Jeau, who did not anticipate dancing overmuch, as she had made but few acquaintances in the hotel, watched the colorful, shifting scene with interest. There was the usual miscellany of a masquerade—Pierrot jostling against King of the Mountains, Marie Antoinette flaunting their jewels before the eyes of denatured fops, with here and there an occasional costume of outstanding originality or merit of design. Contrary to her expectations, however, Jeau soon found herself with more partners than she had time to bestow, and, newly emancipated from the rigour of her party's mourning, she threw herself into the enjoyment of the moment with all the long-repressed enthusiasm of her youth.

It was nearing the small hours when at last she found herself alone for a few moments. In the exhilaration of rapid movement she had completely forgotten the earlier fatalities of the day, but now she was beginning to feel conscious of the strain which the morning's skating, followed by that long, exhausting struggle to defeat the bilious had imposed upon even young bones and muscles. Close at hand was a deserted alcove, and she hurriedly slipped off her dress, and the "salon," and here Jeau found temporary sanctuary, subduing thankfully on to a big cushioned divan.

The sound of the orchestra came to her ears pleasantly dulled by the heavy folds of the screening curtain. Vaguely she could feel the rhythmic pulsing, the sense of movement, in the "salon" beyond. It was all very soothing and restful, and she leaned her head against a fat, pink cushion.

"I beg your pardon," she said stiltedly. "Again that ghint of ironical amusement in his eyes."

"For what, mademoiselle?" "She was conscious of a rising indignation, but she could not understand it; he seemed to have completely changed from the man of a few hours ago. Then he had proved himself to be good, a comrade, been entirely delightful in his thought and care of her, whereas now he appeared bent on wilfully misunderstanding her, putting her in a false position just for his own amusement."

Testing Gripe Theories

Scientists Take Big Chances When Making Some Investigations. Scientists in their own way, are nearly as intrepid as the more spectacular winners of Victoria Cross, and it is not their fault that every line of research does not involve the risk of death or mutilation. When such a subject does present itself, however, the investigator seldom hesitates.

A case in point is that of Van Cuyper Heller, a famous big game hunter, an authority on deep-sea fishes and a valued member of the American Museum of History. The curious subject he has chosen to investigate is: which sharks really attack human beings and their methods in offence and defence.

Two or three rather eccentric research inquiries come from the United States. One of them, carried out by an efficiency expert, resulted in the world-shaking conclusion that typists do their best work while seated at desk chairs.

Just why Professor G. H. Vansell, of California University, weighed the growth of a hive of bees would be rather difficult to explain to a non-scientific audience. But he did it, and the information that the average hourly loss of weight by perspiration of the whole hive of bees is, in winter, 36 millionths of an ounce, and in summer twenty-five times as much.

Pioneer Smelting Plants

Sweden Manufactured Iron and Steel During Middle Ages

That Sweden was a pioneer country with regard to iron and steel manufacture during the Middle Ages has been proved by a medieval writer recently found, dated March 20, A.D. 1360, which mentions an iron furnace situated at Vikmanshyttan, in the Westmanland province of Dalarna, where iron manufacture is still carried on. The document states that one-fourth of the Vikmanshyttan furnace belonged by right to one Olof Torildsson, whose existence as well as that of the other signatories, has been proved by genealogical research. Mining has, of course, been carried on in Sweden from the times immemorial, although the methods of earlier ages were rather primitive. This last discovery proves satisfactorily that some 600 years ago the iron-masters of Dalarna had introduced the furnace method in the Swedish iron industry.

YEAR'S ENDING

Now that the year turns towards its ending.

With gold and seed-time leaves descending.

Let me drift, too.

Let me forget too much and longer.

Too many plans and hopes to ponder.

Behind I leave the city's clamor

As down strange paths of dream and glamour.

No tangled skein the care and travail.

No tangled skein would I unravel.

Gone now despair before attaining.

Sweet, sweet, this year's life you gain.

This beauty, through the year is waning.

That throbs and lives!

Five Times Greater This Year Than in Previous Year

Production of gold in Manitoba during the current year is estimated at 100,000 ounces, five times greater than the amount produced in previous years, according to Hon. G. D. "Many interesting spots are being reported and it is expected two more mines will be opened next spring," he added.

"Be kindly affectioned one to another with brotherly love."—Romans xii. 10.

To men mankind with tithes of flowing wealth.

With rank to grace them, or to crown with brains and beauty, all praise above.

Our little lot denies; yet liberal still, God gives its counterpart to every ill.

Nor let us murmur at our stunted power.

When kindness, love, and concord meet.

The gift of ministering to others' ease, To give some impartial Heaven decrees;

The gentle offices of patient love, Beyond all praise and glory, are above;

The kind forbearance at a brother's fault.

The angry word suppressed, the taunting thought.

Doubling a Retail Business in Five Years

An Advertisement Addressed to

To double a retail business in five years, add 15 per cent to the sale of the preceding year. At the end of five years, sales will be double their present amount.

our Local Retailers

Increasing one's sales to the extent of 15 per cent. per annum to sales can be accomplished in two main ways. Thus:

1. Increase the amount of each sales transaction by an average of 15 per cent. (Note: This is not the same as raising your prices 15 per cent. To do that would be fatal, even if possible).
2. Increase the number of customers served daily to the extent of 15 per cent.

Good salesmanship will enable a retailer to raise the level of his average sales transaction—with advantage to both his customer and himself. Thus, a well informed buyer will readily pay 20 cents or 25 cents more for a pair of gloves or stockings or shoes, or for a piece of enamelware, if the better value of the higher-priced article is well presented.

But the better way of raising sales to the extent of 15 per cent. is to increase the number of your customers.

Customer-increase comes from (1) satisfactory service, (2) satisfactory goods and prices; (3) good window displays; and (4) good advertisements in this newspaper.

Men and women buyers always want to be informed, in their homes, by newspaper advertisements, about things which they plan to buy; and they are responsive to retailers' invitations. Also, they like to see the advertisements of those retailers whose customers they are.

A silent retailer can hardly hope to increase his business; and it's pretty certain he won't double it in five years.

Issued by the Canadian Weekly Newspaper Association.
